Film Task 2

Battleship Potemkin

- Director: Sergei Eisenstein
- Made In: Soviet Union in 1925
- Genre: Historical Drama

Category: Historically significant film

This is because, the film was used as a propaganda film, meaning that this film was significant in history for how people felt for the communist's. As well as that, in 1958, the film was known as the best film ever made.

A Bug's Life

- Director: John Lasseter
- Made In: America In 1998
- Genre: Children animated comedy

Category: Mainstream film

This was another mainstream film used to making money, making $363 million at the Box Office. This was an extremely successful film, surpassing a similar one called 'Antz' that was released just before a bug's life.

The Shape Of Water

- Director: Guillermo del Toro
- Made In: America in 2017
- Genre: Romantic, Dark Fantasy

Category: Art film

This film is an art piece, because it's telling us a message, that we shouldn't judge people by their looks, just like the aquatic creature in the film, or judge someone differently just because their mute, like the main character of this film 'Elisa Esposito' played by Sally Hawkins.

The Seventh Samurai

- Director: Akira Kurosawa
- Made In: Japan in 1954
- Genre: Drama

Category: Historically significant

This is because, the film has been critically acclaimed, even to this day it's known as one of the best films ever to most film critics. It has also influenced many other films in the process.

The Breakfast Club

- Director: John Hughes
- Made In: America in 1985
- Genre: Drama, Comedy

Category: Mainstream Film

Although the breakfast club was critically acclaimed as one of the best films ever, it hasn't done anything to inspire other films. So it can't be historically significant, but it is a good film to see the peak in 1980's cinema, still being ranked one of the greatest films ever to this day.

The Wizard Of Oz

- Directors: Victor Fleming, Mervyn LeRoy, King Vidor, George Cukor, Norman Taurog.
- Made In: 1939 in American
- Genre: Musical, Fantasy

Category: Historically Significant

This film was famous for its use of "Technicolor" as well as its adaption of its use of the 1900 book. This film is historically significant, because it set the bar for musicals, winning awards for both the best original soundtrack, as well as best original song.

Once Upon A Time In The West

- Director: Sergio Leone
- Made In: Italy in 1968
- Genre: Drama, Action

Category: Mainstream Film

There where many western films at the time this was made, though this one did adopt a unique style, it was clearly made to capitalize on the genera to make money.

Deadpool 2

- Director: David Leitch
- Made In: America in 2018
- Genre: Fantasy, Science fiction, Action, Comedy

Category: Mainstream Film

These days, any Marvel film is mainstream. None of them strive to achieve anything historically significant, though all of them do perform extremely successfully in the box-office. For this year, Deadpool 2 is currently one of the top grossing films, alongside other Marvel films as well.

Submarine

- Director: Richard Ayoade
- Made In: America/UK in 2010
- Genre: Drama, Melodrama

Category: Mainstream Film

I think this, because the film was made to piggy back off the novel made 2 years before hand. This film was just used to make money, like other mainstream films.

Love Simon

- Director: Greg Berlanti
- Made In: America in 2018
- Genre: Drama, Romance

Category: Art film

This film was made to send a message to the public, telling us that it doesn't matter if you're straight or gay. I feel like this makes it an Artistic film, because art is there to spread a message and inspire people, just like this film did.

Fitzcarraldo

- Director: Werner Herzog
- Made In: Germany in 1982
- Genre: Drama, Adventure

Category: Historically Significant

This is because, the film is famously known for its use of practical effects over the use of CGI or computers. This film is known for moving a 320-ton steamship over a hill, which was considered nearly impossible at the time.

Alphaville

- Director: Jean-Luc Godard
- Made In: France in 1965
- Genre: Drama, Mystery

Category: Historically Significant

I think this, because during the filming of this film, no set pieces were used, and it showed the film industry that good films can be made from real life locations, instead of spending loads of money on fake backdrops, or for the future, green screens.

Manhattan

- Director: Woody Allen
- Made In: America in 1979
- Genre: Drama, Comedy-drama

Category: Mainstream film

This is a mainstream film, because it was just made for the time, a simple comedy made to make money at the box office. Nothing significant happened during the filming of this film.

Toy Story

- Director: John Lasseter
- Made In: America in 1995
- Genre: Adventure, Children Comedy Animation.

Category: Historically Significant

This is because, Toy Story was the first feature length film to be entirely animated. This led Pixar to make more children's films while leading the animated market. It's because of this film that we have the animation we have today.
