

Intra-Diegetic

The entire Cloverfield movie is a great example of Intra-Diegetic cinematography. The film is shown through the perspective of a video camera. This puts the audience as close as possible into the position of the main characters and forces them to see what the characters see.